

6 great reasons for businesses to support Community Circles

Develop your employees' skills

Our training programme is a proven way to develop skills that are just as valuable to business as they are to communities: leadership, problem-solving, communication, creativity, teamworking and facilitation amongst others. We then continue to support all our volunteers on an ongoing basis, so they can keep learning and growing over their time with us.

Make an impact in your community

We operate in a number of areas across the country, but each one is overseen by a dedicated local Community Circles Connector. Their local knowledge and personal touch make us the ideal charity to help you to forge long-lasting links and generate goodwill with local people. We're a small charity, but together we could deliver big change - right on your doorstep!

You'll be supported at every step

From getting staff interested in taking part, through to training and development and telling the story of your impact, we're here to help you at every stage of the journey. We can run webinars or face-to-face training, supply e-learning modules, or supply printed collateral to promote what you're doing in your office. It's a flexible approach and your local Community Circles Connector will work to support you in a way that suits your business's needs.

We always put people first

Community Circles are based on the principles of person-centred thinking. This means that we work hard to understand what matters to the people we support, before we plan practical steps to make it happen. But person-centred thinking isn't just for people we support; our volunteers are treated as individuals, too. We work with them to identify their individual strengths and areas to develop, helping them to reach their full potential.

Lots of way for you to get involved

Every business is different, and whether large or small, we can develop a programme that works for you. It doesn't matter if you're a one-man band or one-thousand strong, we have ways for businesses of all sizes to contribute at all levels.

We'll help to spread the word

We believe passionately in the work we do, and we love to shout about it! Through sharing inspirational stories about what Community Circles are doing, we spread the word for our charity and your business. These stories can also make great content for your internal communications, improving staff engagement and helping to build a sense of pride and purpose.
